It appears that a detachment of constability, for four days, fought 600 savage head hunters of the Galloga tribe, all the time being without the council had been unable to raise the of service. Vacancies caused by refood. Two of the constabularies were killed, but of the enemy, at least 90 fell, and a large quantity of ammunition, seven guns, 130 head axes, many bolos and other weapons were captured.

Lieutenant Velusquez, commanding the constabulary, was engaged in a hand-to-hand conflict with seven of the tribesmen, killing six with his pistol and finishing the seventh with a head axe which he snatched from the hands of one of those already killed. The official report of Gen. Allen shows that the white men were treacherously attacked while holding a seemingly friendly conference.
